

Most of the light on earth comes from the sun. The sun's light also heats earth. Without light, earth would be too cold and dark for living things to survive.

How else does light help us?
Can we make our own light?

Sunlight helps plants to grow. Plants give people and animals two important things that they need to live: food to eat and oxygen to breathe.

How can we tell that light always travels in straight lines?