58		I was lucky enough to witness the coronation of Queen Elizabeth II, whose long reign began more than 60 years ago. It was a truly great occasion, despite the poor weather . A fine mist turned into quite heavy rain , but this didn't affect the crowd's excitement. After a long wait I could see the troops of mounted horsemen coming nearer. All the soldiers marching by, proudly wore their medals . And then came the Queen in her golden coach. What an unforgettable scene ! It had such an emotional effect on everyone. We all cheered; some even cried! ( Except that is, for one little girl, who had fallen asleep!) I would not have missed it for anything.
59		Once upon a time (their) were four (bears) – two (pairs) of twins. One (pair) were (groan) up bears and the other pair were quite young. The youngsters could not (weight) to be older. They (wood) count the days on (there) tiny (pause), hoping that soon they would be big. But the adults said "What's the hurry? Just (except) what you are and enjoy yourself." And off they went, for a bit of (piece)  "It's all very well for them," said one of the youngsters. "They can do what they want." "So can we!" said his twin, and off he zoomed, arms outstretched, pretending to be a (plain). He made so much noise, the adults (herd) him. "That young bear is (effecting) my nap," said one of them. "(Heal) have to stop!" So he hid behind a tree, and as the little bear (past) by, he (court) him in his (grate) big paws. "I know I said enjoy yourself," he said with a (grown) "but please, will you do it somewhere else?"

62		It is difficult to describe just how important science is to our lives. Without the experiments scientists perform, many things we take for granted would not exist. Even in the 21st century , for example, new medicines are being made. In their laboratories, scientists sometimes have to separate microscopic parts of a substance in order to use it to create a new material . It's hard to imagine where we would be without their specialist knowledge .
